Job Preparation 3 – Cover Letters

1. Sell Yourself: Advertise and Market your Skills

What is the point of a cover letter? If I already have a resume, why do I need a cover letter? The cover letter serves a variety of purposes:

- It demonstrates professionalism and communicates “soft skills.”
- It helps set you apart from other applicants.
- It allows you to include relevant information that didn't fit into your resume.
- It allows some of your personality (your voice) to show through and shine!!

2. What's inside?

- A cover letter is an introduction to you and your resume for employers, and should be included and mailed with every resume that you send in to a business. The cover letter should be in addition to, not in place of, an application and resume.
- Each cover letter that you write should be tailored specifically to the job opening. If possible, address the letter to the specific person in charge of hiring. If this information is unavailable, address as “Dear Hiring Manager”
  - If you do not know the name of the hiring manager, it is usually acceptable to call the company and ask. You could also look online.
- The purpose of a cover letter is to tell the employer what is missing from the resume. It should include:
  - One or two short paragraphs referring specifically to the job you are applying for and the reasons you are qualified for that particular position. i.e. skills as they relate to the job description.
  - It is imperative that you have a solid understanding of the needs of the employer, so that you can effectively sell yourself.
  - If the company emphasizes certain values, emphasize those in your cover letter (presuming you share those values)
- Make sure to save your cover letters to a flash drive or on your email so you always have it and can easily update it.

3. Things to Avoid

- Spelling/grammatical errors. Check your spelling and grammar; if you make too many errors, employers are likely to make negative assumptions.
- Inconsistent formatting. Make sure the format of your cover letter matches the format of your resume. That way—if an employer detaches one from the other—it will be easy for her/him to identify that they go together.
- Salary requirements. Do not discuss salary requirements until you have received an official job offer.
- Too much information. Limit your cover letter to one page. Hiring managers are busy and your goal is to spark their interests as quickly as possible.
- Generic content. It is okay to use a template for your cover letter (in fact, we encourage it), but make sure that you tailor it to the job you are seeking. Employers receive a lot of cover letters and they will know if yours is generic.

4. Steps in Creating a Cover Letter

- There are several formats you can use to create a cover letter. Hand Up Cooperative advises that you start by using the following method to demonstrate the skills that you possess and how they match with what the employer is seeking.
- Step 1
  - Locate the job description of the job that you are applying for.
  - Within that job description identify and highlight all of the hard and soft skills that the employer is looking for in an applicant.
    1. The job description will likely list several skills, but it might also imply that you should possess several other skills. Try to identify both the explicitly-stated skills and the ones that are implied.
- Step 2
  - Pick out some of the skills that the employer is looking for that you possess and list them in one column.
  - In the next column, list how you can convince an employer that you have that particular skill.
- Step 3
  - Start the cover letter process; below is a template for a cover letter that identifies and highlights the skills that were pulled from the job description.
  - Make sure to have the correct headings in a cover letter. This displays professionalism, ensures that the right person receives the cover letter, and guarantees that the recipient knows who it is from.

Follow the example on the next page to see each step in detail.

5. Example:

Travel Agent Job Description

The job of the Travel Agent is as a facilitator for arranging and helping customers in opting for the best travel packages that suit their interests and likings. The responsibilities of the travel agent is to keep himself/herself updated about the travel and tour packages and other travel related information so as to help and query the customer's needs. The travel agent must also assist and support their customers in all their travelling plans and make arrangements to provide them with best of services.

Example Step 1-

- Highlight all of the skills that were outlined in the job description.

Example Step 2-

- List the skills that you've identified on a piece of paper. Then for each skill, start to build the case that you have that skill. Ideally you will have some piece of concrete information that 'backs you up,' such as stating that you have great customer service skills and you have numerous received customer compliment and even a few raises due to your strong customer service skills.
- Another way to convince employers is to think of short but powerful stories that illustrate the fact that you have a particular skill.

Example Step 3-

- Put it all together in the following cover letter format:

Your Name
123 Main Street
Anywhere, CO 90013
